One day two penguins Milla and Jude went on a walk through the aquarium.

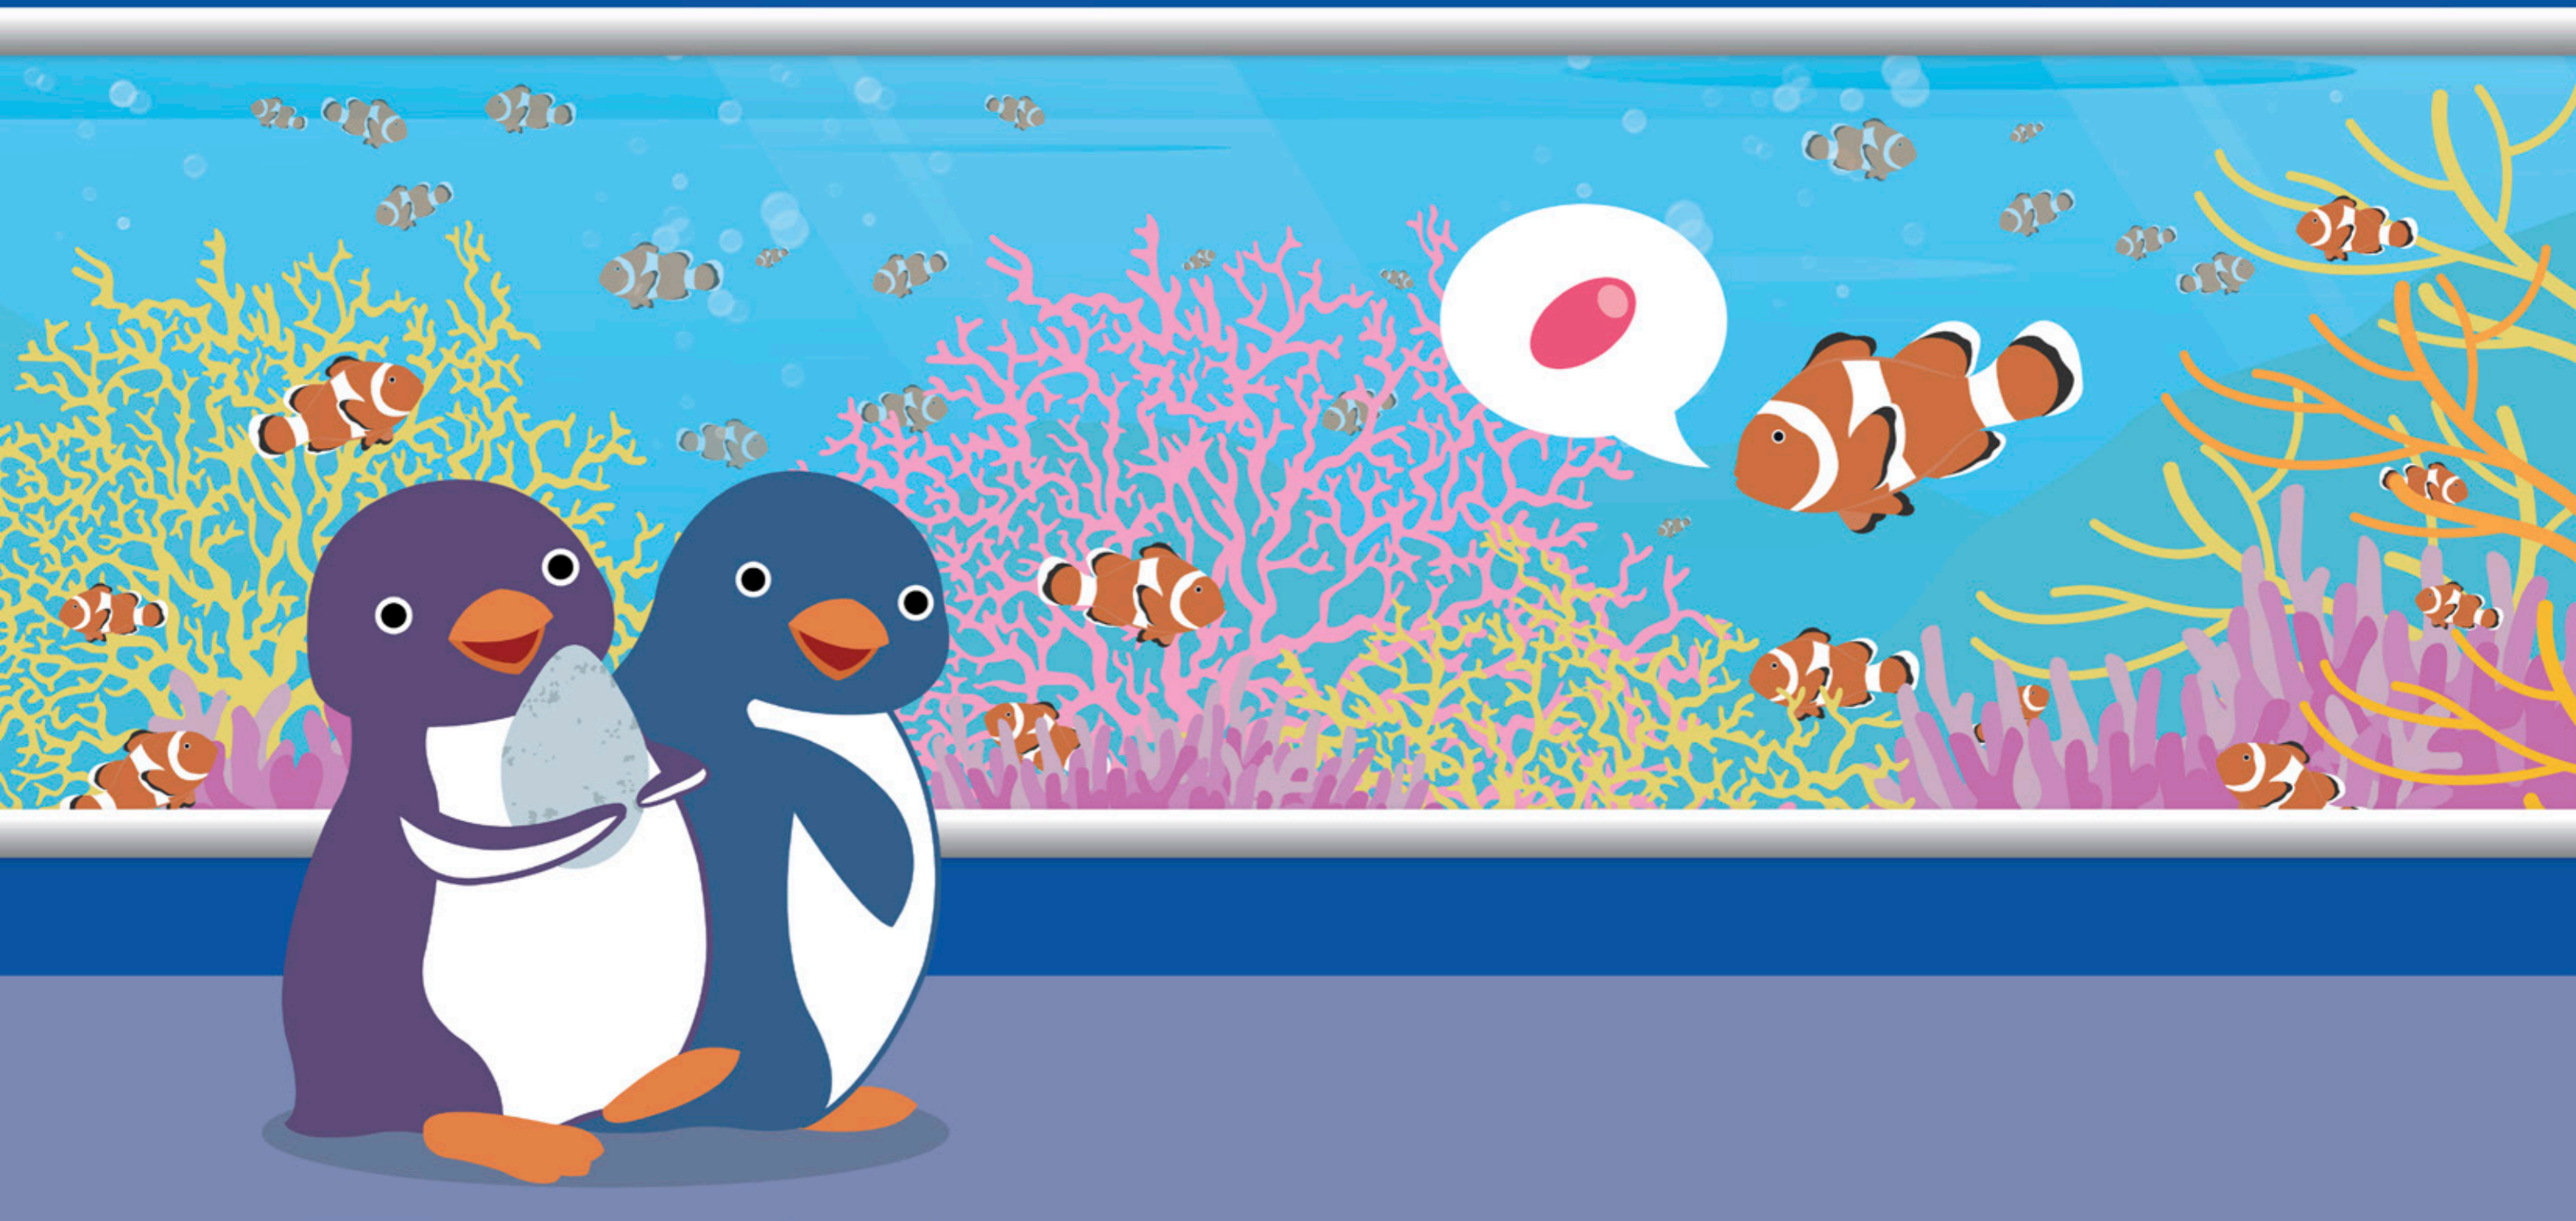

On their walk they noticed a little egg all by itself.

Jude and Milla decided that they should look for the egg's parents. Let's ask the other animals if this egg belongs to them.

Jude and Milla came across Cleo the clownfish.
“Cleo, is this your baby egg?” asked Milla.
“No, my eggs are small, pink in colour and do not have a hard shell” replied Cleo.

Jude and Milla looked at each other and said
“We wonder who this egg belongs to?”
They picked up the egg and continued
on their search.

Next on their walk, Jude and Milla came across Magnus the Port Jackson shark.

“Magnus, Magnus” shouted Jude.

“Is this your egg?”

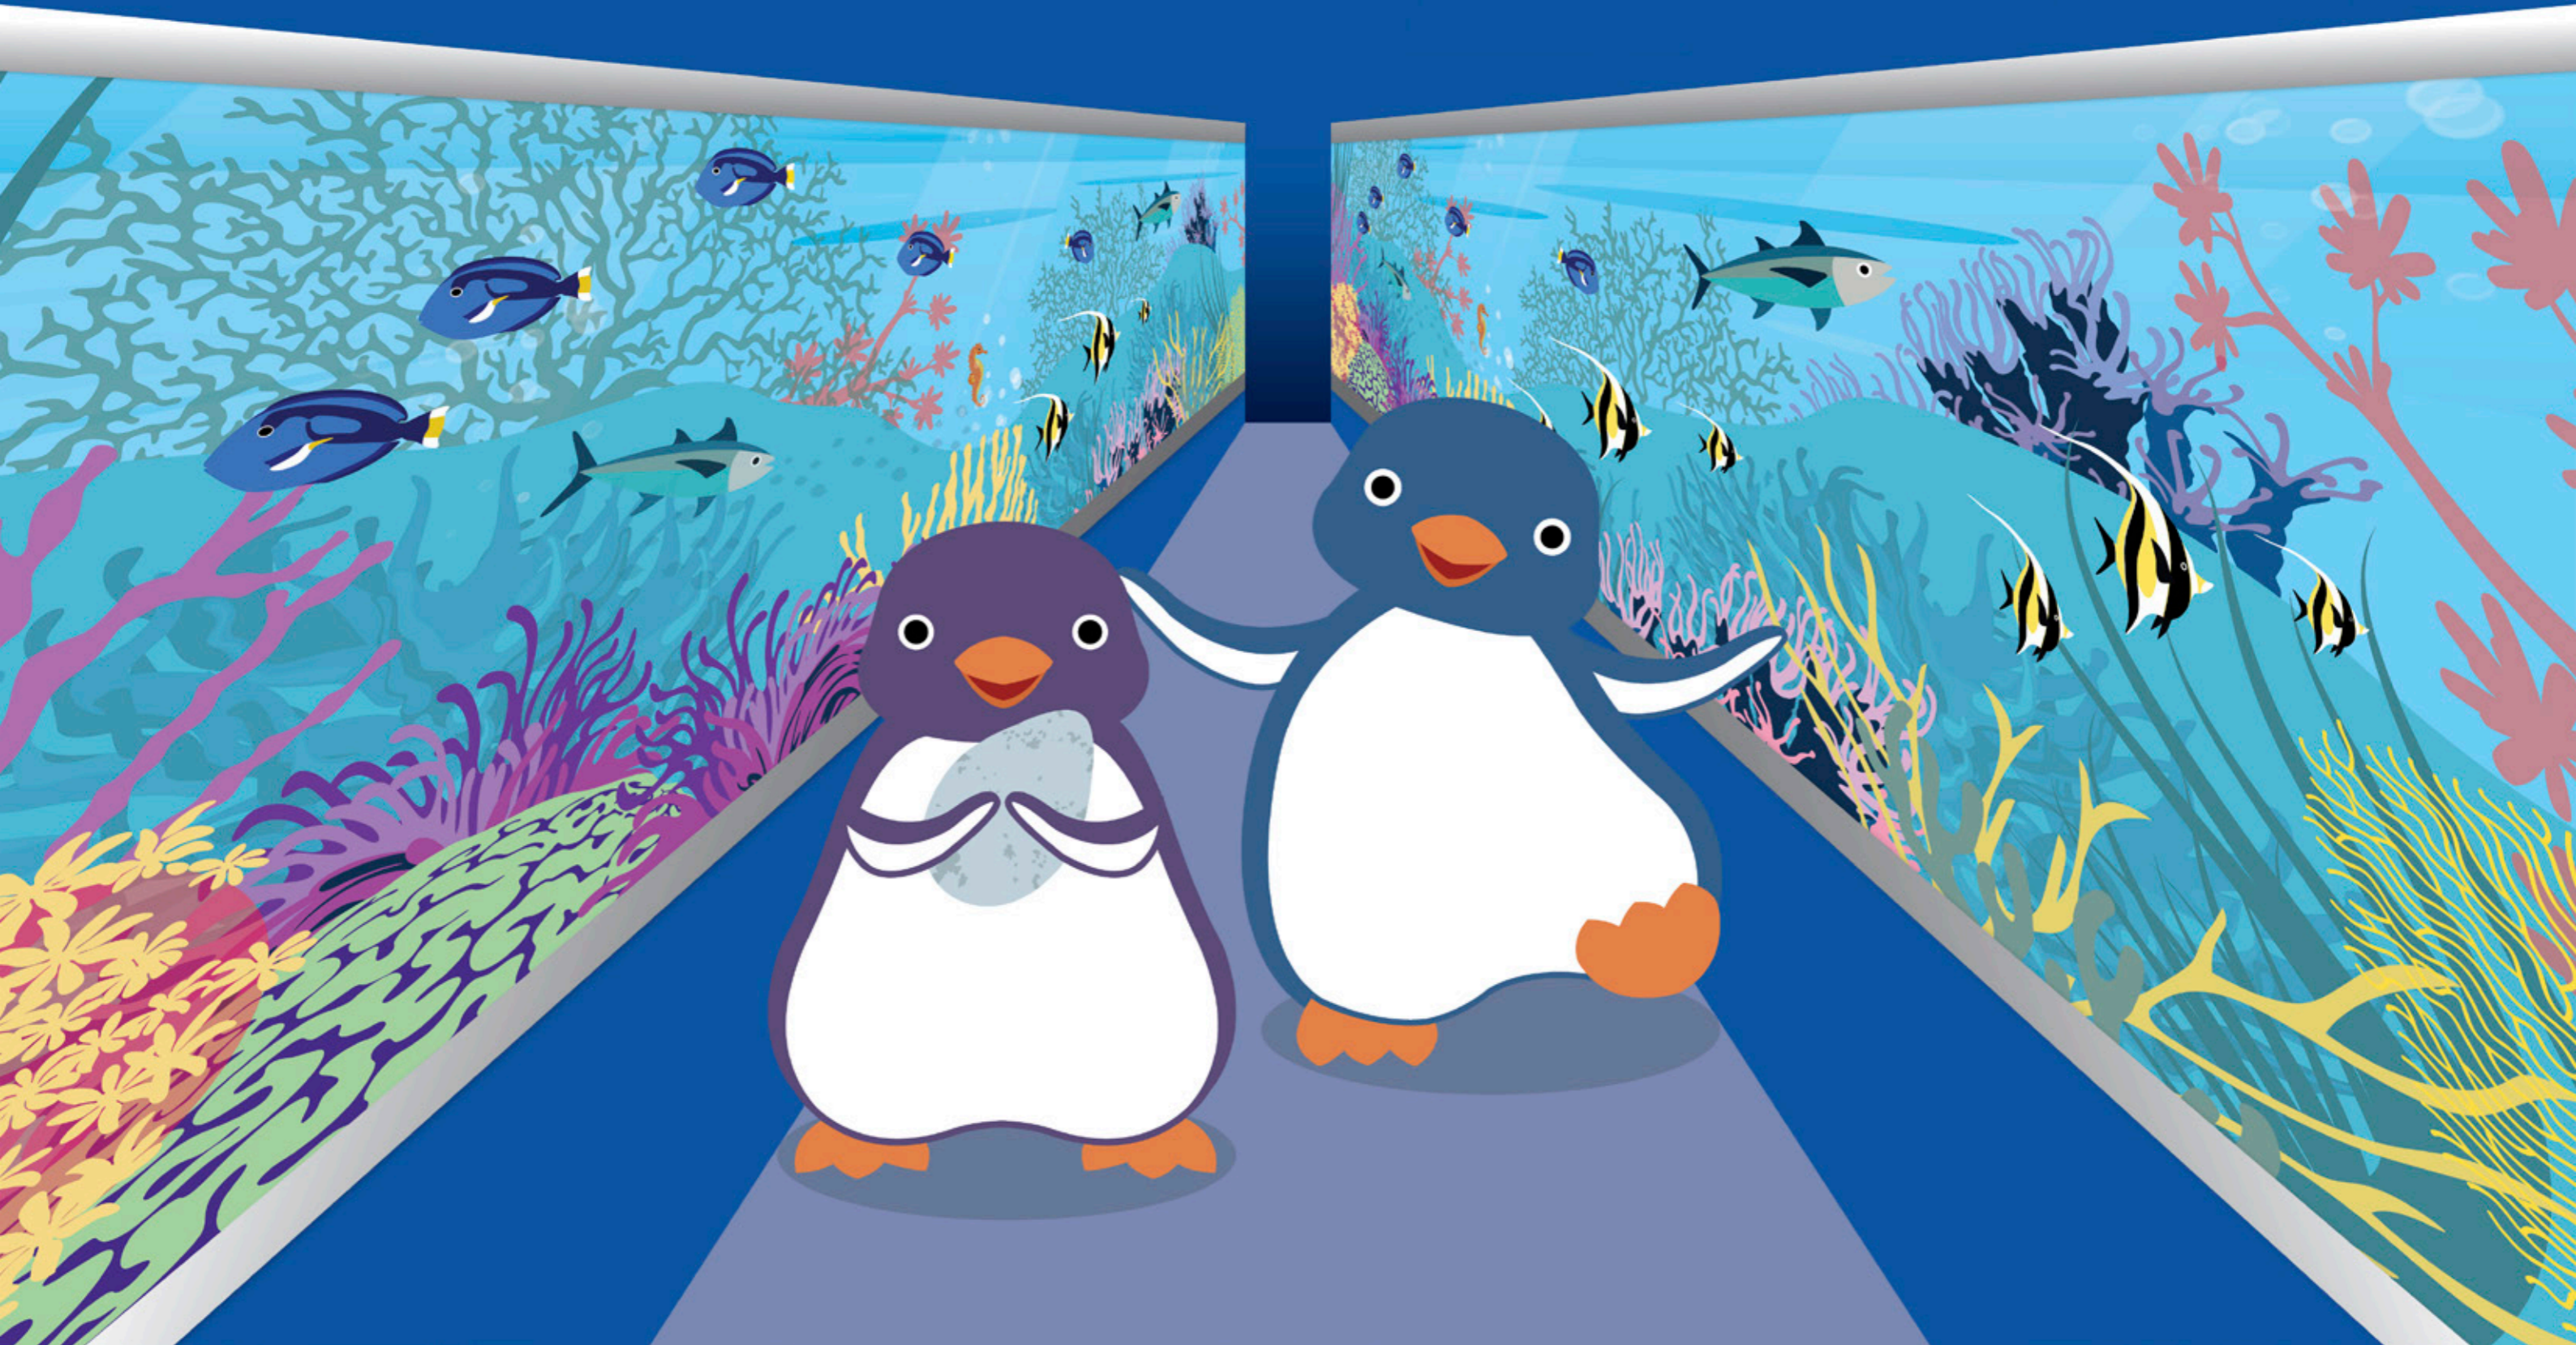

Magnus swam over to Jude and Milla and took a closer look at the egg.

“I lay eggs but that does not look like mine.

My eggs are green, spirally and look like seaweed” said Magnus.

Jude and Milla looked at each other and said
“We wonder who this egg belongs to?”
They picked up the egg and continued
on their search.

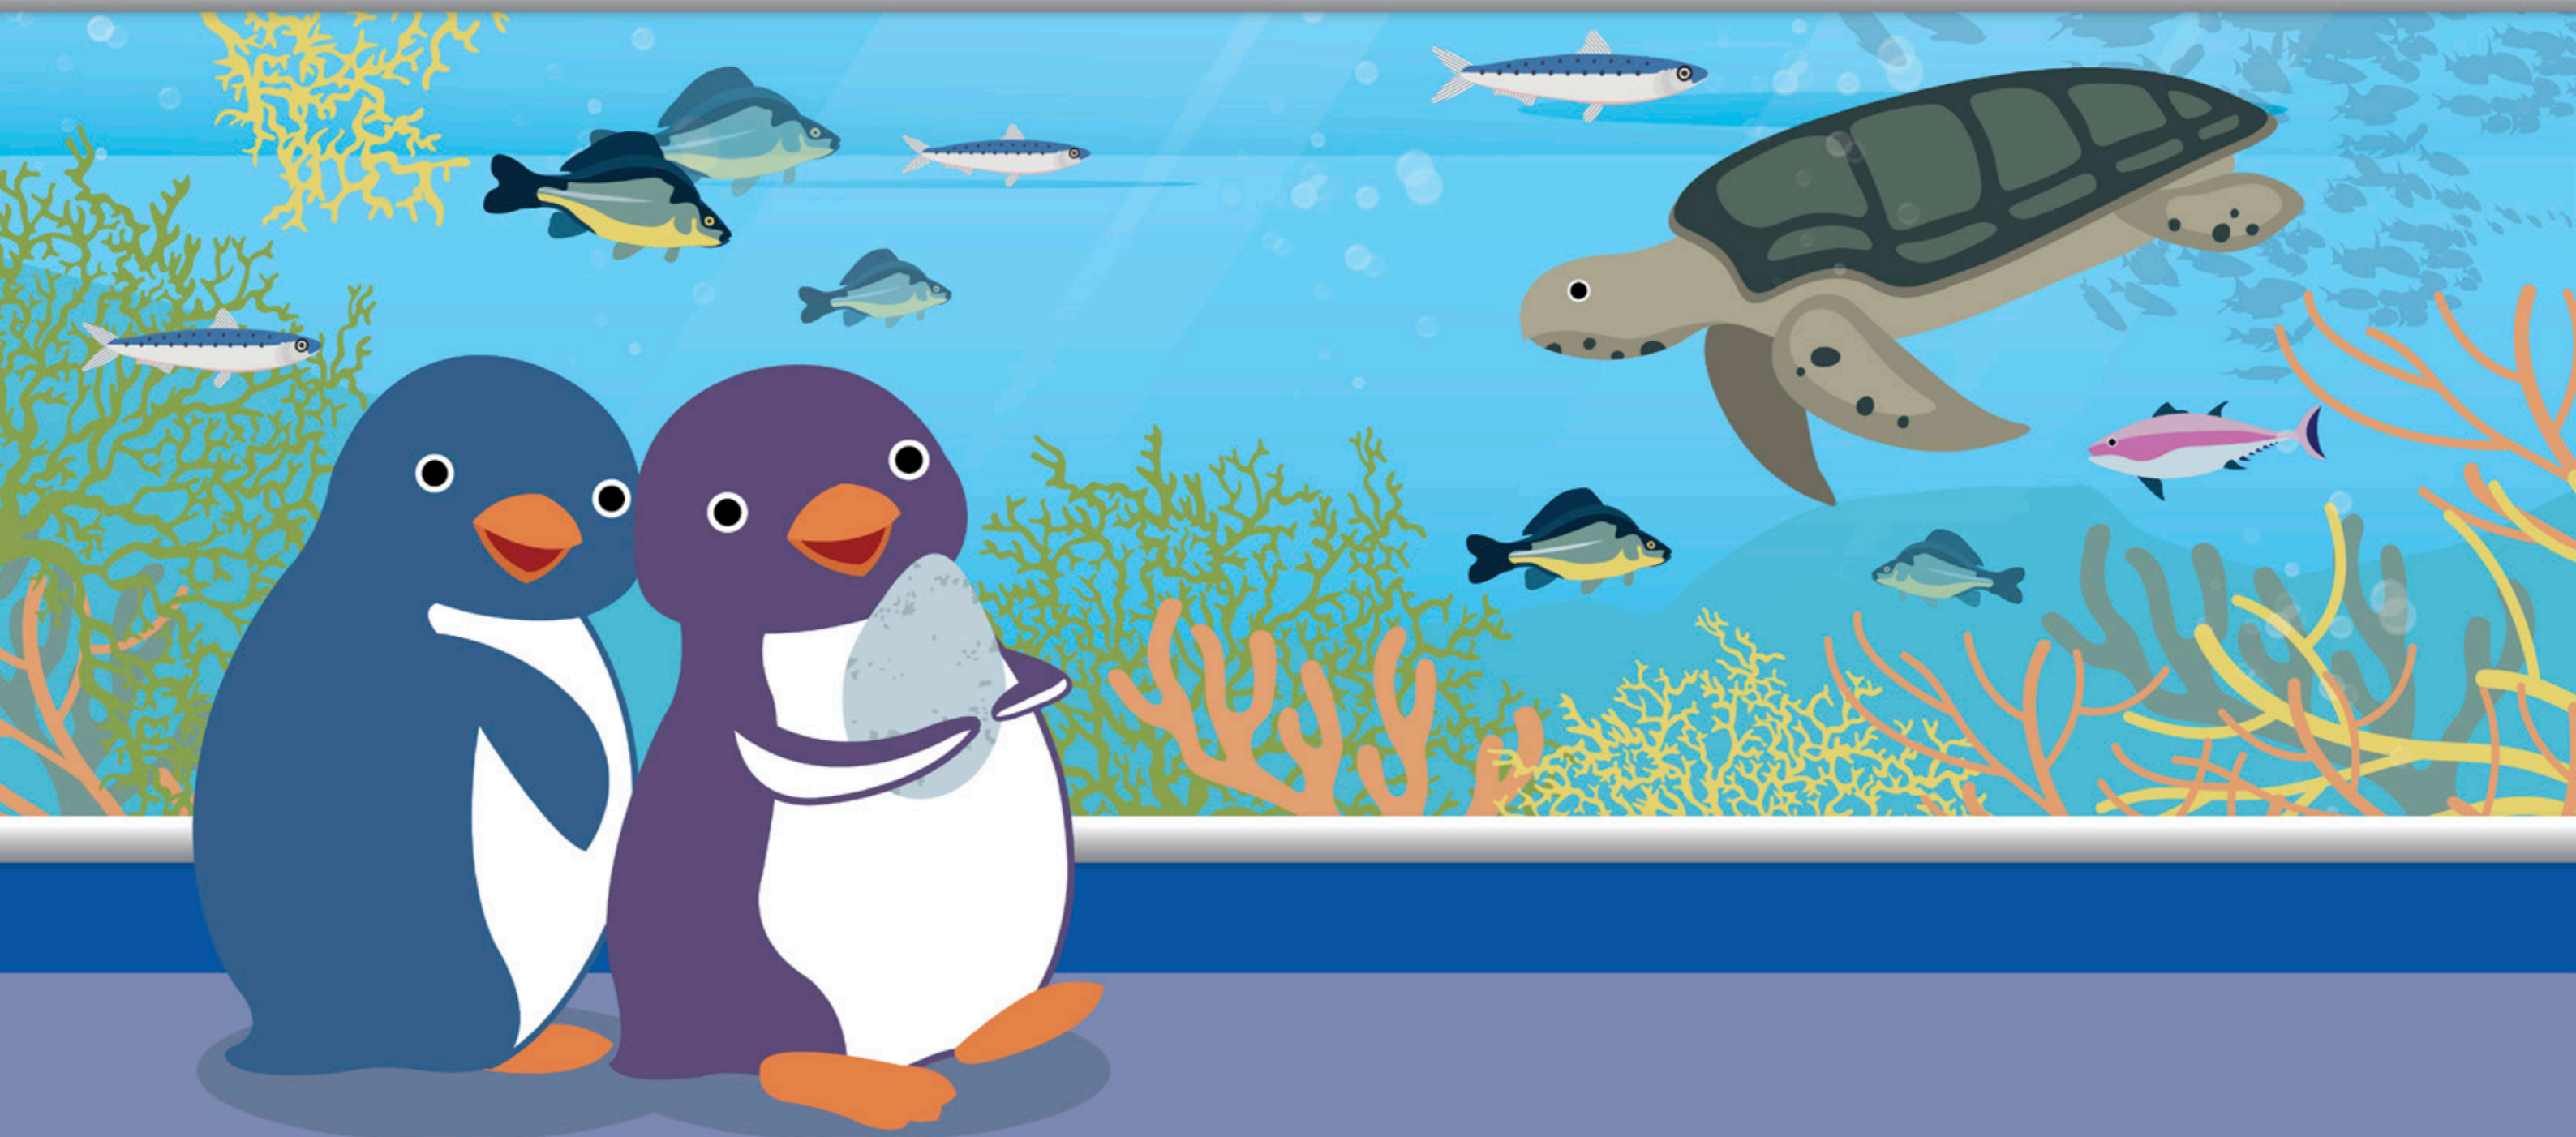

Next on their walk, Jude and Milla came across Myrtle the Sea Turtle.

“Myrtle, Myrtle” shouted Milla.
“Is this your baby egg?” asked Jude.

Myrtle swam slowly over to look at the egg.

“Sorry, Jude and Milla, I do lay eggs but this egg is not mine!” replied Myrtle.

Feeling unsure about what to do with the little lost egg, Jude and Milla decided to take the egg home to look after.

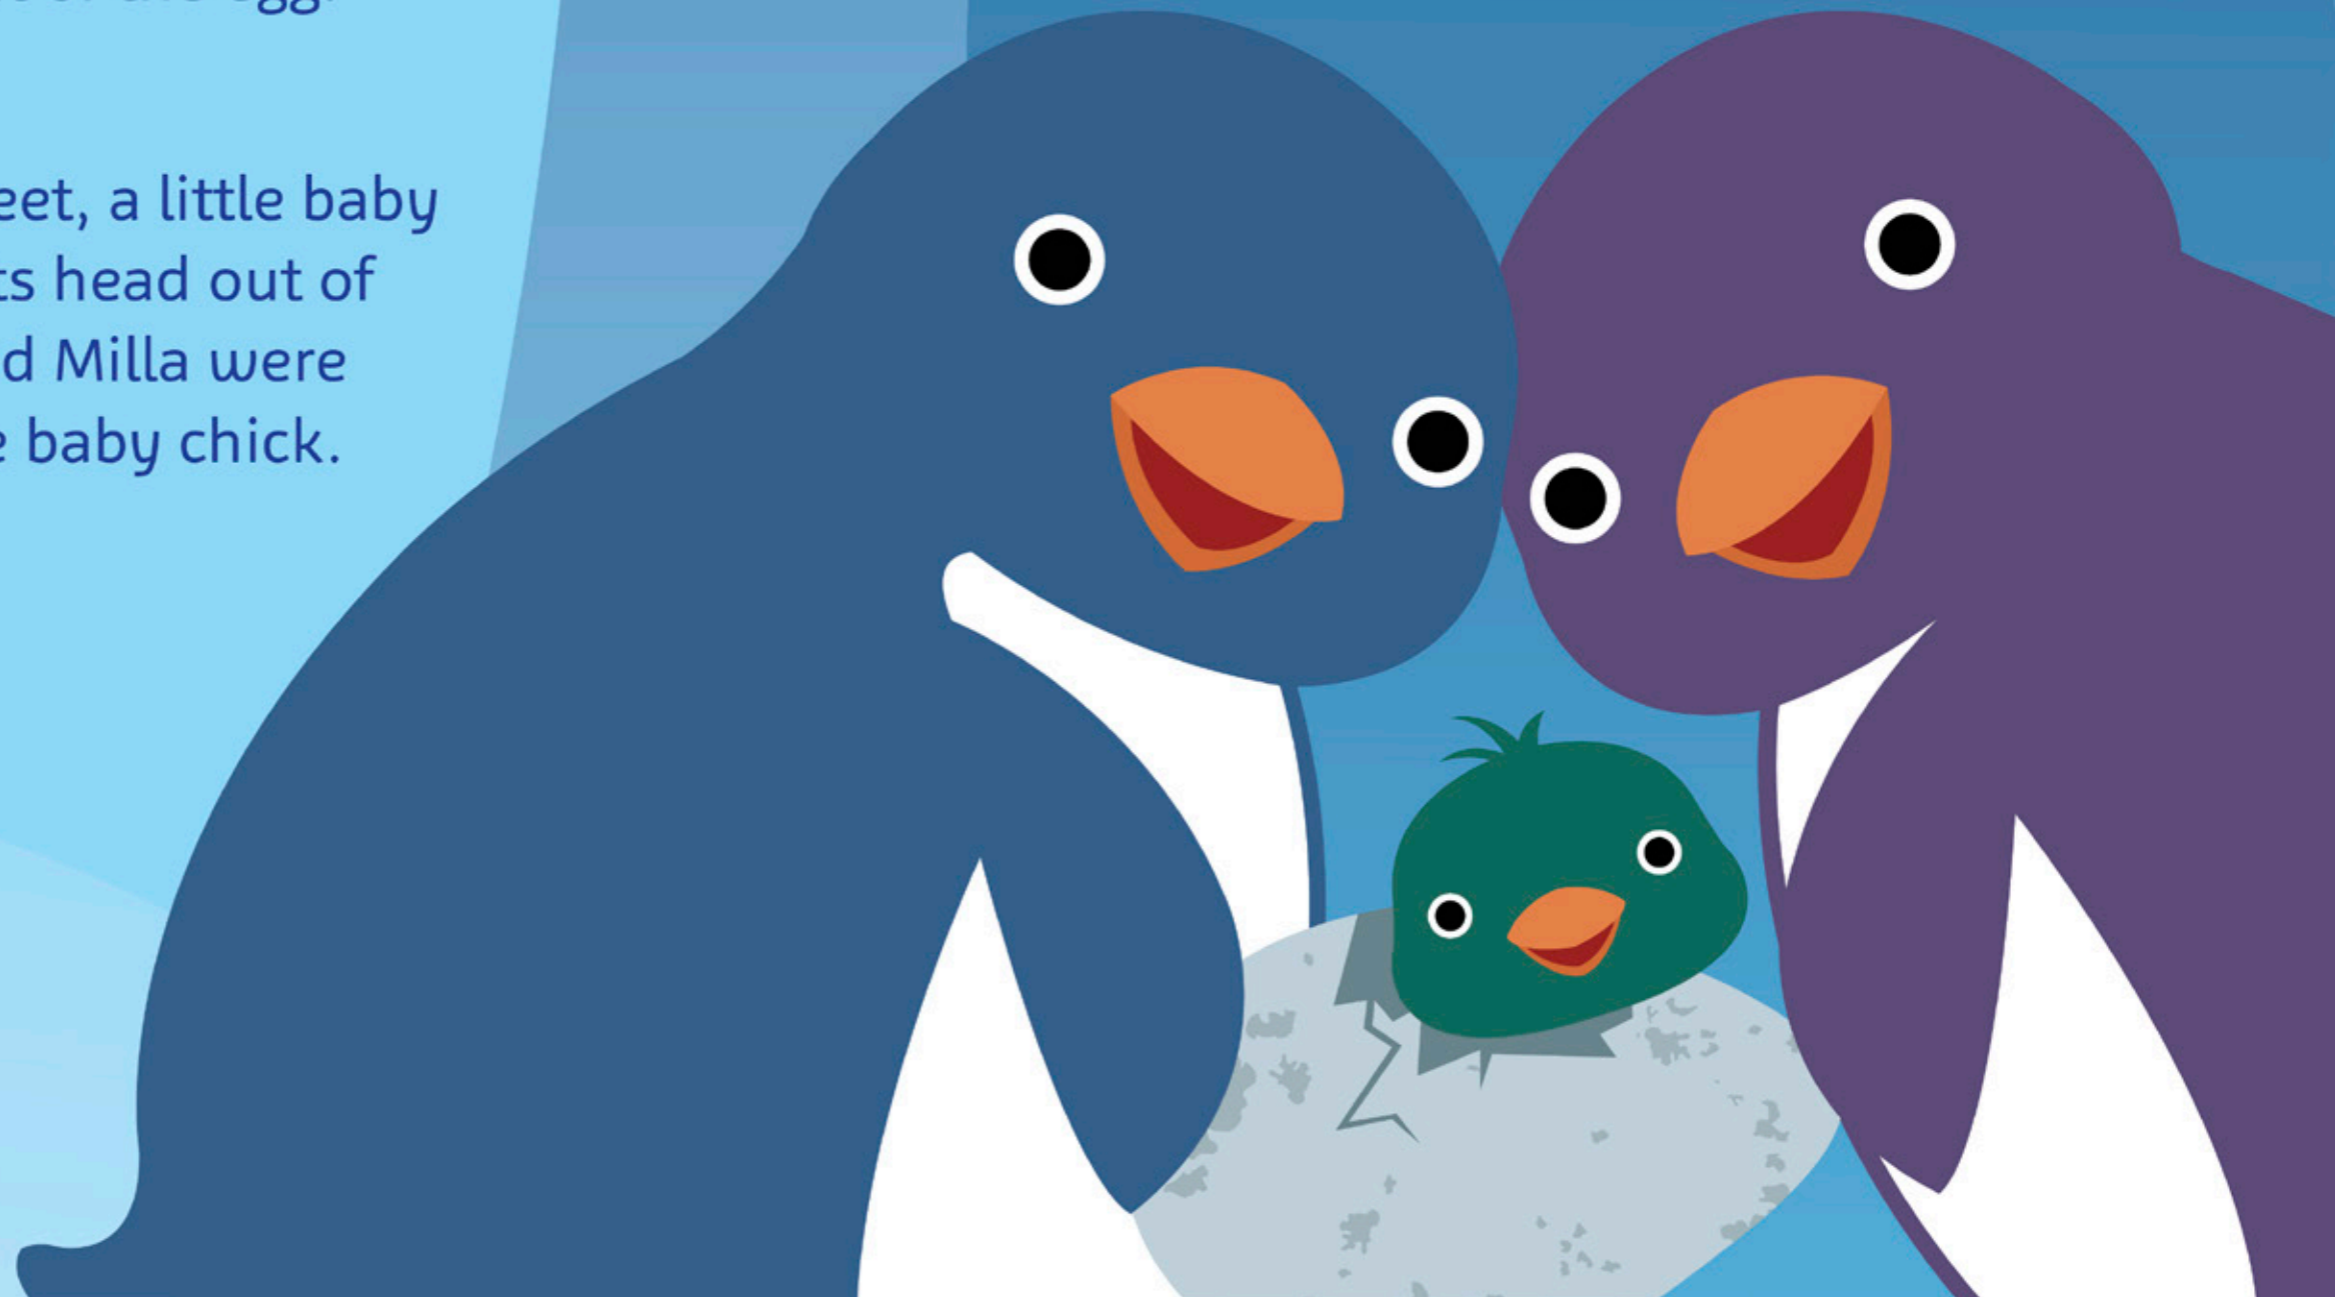

Jude and Milla went home and made a nest. They both took turns sitting on and looking after the egg. Patiently waiting for the little lost egg to hatch.

After a few weeks of taking very good care of the little egg, Jude and Milla started to feel movement inside the egg and could hear a tiny cracking noise.

Excited at the sound, both Jude and Milla waited in anticipation to see what would come out of the egg.

With a tiny chirp and tweet, a little baby penguin chick poked its head out of the egg. Both Jude and Milla were delighted to meet the baby chick.

The two penguins were so proud to have a little baby. They wrapped their wings around baby Torsten!

He was no longer the lost little egg!
